PART 1: SUBMITTING YOUR DISSERTATION

THE FOLLOWING GUIDE PRESENTS THE NECESSARY STEPS INVOLVED IN A DOCTORAL CANDIDATE'S DISSERTATION SUBMISSION AS REQUIRED BY THE NYU GRADUATE SCHOOL OF ARTS AND SCIENCE.

Step 1: Applying for Graduation

- The candidate is required to apply for graduation on Albert at least 3 months prior to the expected date of graduation.
- Alternative diploma address and/or diploma name may be selected at the time of the graduation application.
- Please note the name on the dissertation submission must match the diploma name. By default, your "primary" name (as it is entered in Albert and as it appears on your NYU transcript) is printed on your diploma. You can elect to have your "preferred" name (as it is entered in Albert) printed on your diploma by updating the Diploma Options page in your Student Center.

Step 2: Preliminary dissertation paperwork

By the preliminary deadline, the candidate must:

- Email preliminary paperwork to gsas.dissertation@nyu.edu:
  - One copy of the Title Page (unsigned)
  - Completion certificate for the Survey of Earned Doctorates (submitted via sed-ncses.org)
- Upload a full draft of the dissertation to ProQuest
- Submit a dissertation abstract to ProQuest
- Submit a Dissertation Publishing Agreement to ProQuest

- If the candidate needs proof of degree completion, please notify GSAS OASA via email to gsas.dissertation@nyu.edu at least four weeks in advance, so we can expedite your dissertation submission.

Step 3: Formatting review / revisions

- GSAS OASA will review the preliminary dissertations for compliance with formatting requirements. Feedback will be submitted via ProQuest.
- After editing/formatting the dissertation text to ensure it complies with any formatting or committee comments, the candidate must upload a final dissertation to ProQuest by the final dissertation deadline.
- Candidate must resubmit revisions for continual review until there are no errors.
- GSAS OASA will approve the final dissertation submission after reviewing the final dissertation for formatting compliance and receiving all final submission paperwork. The candidate will receive approval email via ProQuest and approval will be reflected on the Degree Progress Report.

Step 4: Final dissertation submission

By the final dissertation submission deadline the candidate must:

- Complete the dissertation defense. If you cannot defend by the final dissertation deadline, you must withdraw your graduation application and apply for the next cycle.
  - The Doctoral Thesis Oral Defense Form is handled by your home department. The candidate must make sure the same dissertation title is on the oral defense form, signed and unsigned title pages, and ProQuest.
- Submit the physically (ink) signed title page to gsas.dissertation@nyu.edu.
  - If you are unable to get physical ink signature, please contact gsas.dissertation@nyu.edu to request digital signature processing.
  - Signed title page must be either: ink signature OR digital signature processed by our office
- Upload the final dissertation submission (with all comments incorporated) to ProQuest.
  - If there are no errors, the dissertation will be approved for publication.
  - If formatting errors remain, you must complete further revisions to remedy.

Dissertation submission process review

Preliminary submission

- Preliminary dissertation submitted to ProQuest
- Required documents emailed to gsas.dissertation@nyu.edu

Formatting review

- OASA reviews format and provides required revisions
- candidate must resubmit revisions for continual review until there are no errors

Final submission

- candidate incorporates committee & OASA feedback into final submission by final deadline
- OASA checks formatting again, and requests addtl. revisions if necessary.

Dissertation approval

- Dissertation meets all formatting requirements & all paperwork submitted to OASA
- We only approve dissertations; department confirms degree requirements are met

Dissertation submission process review

- To complete your dissertation submission, our office must have your:
  - Certificate of Completion for the Survey of Earned Doctorates
  - Unsigned and signed copies of your title page, reflecting your final title, diploma name, and graduation date
  - Completed oral defense form
  - Final dissertation that meets formatting requirements

For your dissertation to be approved, all formatting errors must be addressed, and all final paperwork received. Submitting your final dissertation alone does not complete the requirement.

Last Steps

- The candidate should contact the Office of the Bursar to confirm that his/her account is not in arrears.
- The candidate should review his/her permanent address on Albert. Diplomas will be mailed to this address, unless an alternative address was selected during the graduation application.

PART 2: FORMATTING YOUR DISSERTATION

THE FOLLOWING GUIDE PRESENTS THE REQUIRED DISSERTATION FORMAT FOR NYU GRADUATE SCHOOL OF ARTS AND SCIENCE.

Formatting overview

The following formatting requirements apply to the entirety of the dissertation (including cover page, references, appendices, etc.):

- Paper size: 8.5" x 11"
- Margins: 1" on all sides
- Page numbers:
  - must appear at least .75" from the edge of the page and remain unobscured.
  - must be bottom-centered or top-centered. Do not interchange the page number location throughout the dissertation.
- Text: at least 10pt legible font, double spaced
- Consistency: Choose a consistent naming and formatting scheme for the entire dissertation. (i.e. chapter numbering, figure naming, etc.). Follow a consistent formatting style manual used throughout the dissertation: e.g. MLA, Chicago/Turabian or APA*

Front matter

- All front matter must appear in this order ----------→
- Bold items are required
- There are no other sections allowed in the front matter. Below are examples of other information you may wish to include and where to place it:
  - If including a Glossary, the Glossary must precede the Bibliography/References/ Works Cited section at the end of the dissertation.
  - Any publication notes should be in the Acknowledgements, an Appendix, or included in the relevant chapter as a footnote or introductory text.
  - Notes on translation or transliteration should be included in the preface, introduction, in a footnote in relevant sections, or as an appendix.

Cover page

- The cover page must follow the format presented here.
- Dissertation title: your dissertation title must match exactly on ProQuest, your title page, and on your Oral Defense Form
- Author name: your name must match exactly wherever it appears: on the title page, on the copyright page, on ProQuest, and on your Oral Defense Form. IMPORTANT: the name used for your dissertation must match your name as it will appear on your diploma.
- Graduation date: this is the date that your degree is conferred (either January, May, or August). It is NOT the date you complete your oral defense.
- Advisor name: Provide a signature line for your dissertation advisor above their typed full name. The line must be a solid black line (_____). If you have two advisors, the signature lines should be stacked on top of each other. Your final dissertation submission should NOT include the signed version of the cover page.

INTRODUCTION

Controversy surrounds the economic programs sponsored by the International Monetary Fund. The IMF claims that ultimately its policies achieve sustained economic growth. Governments claim that economic crises leave them no choice but to swallow the IMF's medicine. The pain, they assert, will be worse later if the country does not submit to the IMF now. Yet often violent protest confronts the austerity measures of the IMF. General strikes, riots, and ransacking of supermarkets manifest that IMF programs mobilize popular resistance. Scholarly opinion is also divided: statistical findings have ranged over the spectrum of possible conclusions.

Hence the central question of this study: Do IMF programs promote economic growth? To the extent that participation in IMF programs increases individual incomes in the long run, people have greater choices and can presumably lead better lives. However, if IMF programs hurt economic growth even in the long run, at least some groups end up worse off because their governments followed policies advocated by the IMF. In the 1960's the IMF changed its major focus from regulating currency to managing balance of payments crises and launching countries on market-oriented growth strategies.

CHAPTER 1: My First Chapter

With the onset of the Latin American debt crisis in 1982, the IMF faced new criticism. Fixing the economic problems of the Third World was no longer viewed as merely a question of stabilization. The fundamental structure and management of the economy was now soon to be at fault. Stabilization was a futile task as long as the underlying problems in the economy remained. Hence, the IMF began to require that countries in need of foreign exchange assistance implement structural adjustment:

1.1 Abstract

For either unobserved nor observed variables, the effects cancel each other. However, by controlling only for observable variables one increases the unobserved "political will" bias (Przeworski and Limongi 1996; Achen 1986):

> The methodological tools available to answer this question have progressed significantly since the first moratorium on the growth critique. This study advances the treatment of the issue by providing a rigorous statistical approach that has not been applied in previous research. The work first addresses the question of participation: under what conditions do countries participate in IMF-sponsored economic programs? Addressing this allows one to distinguish between what part of economic growth is due to differences in country conditions and what part to the inherent effects of IMF programs. The ultimate goal of the project is to answer the question: What is the effect of IMF programs on economic growth?.[1]

Opponents continued to believe that the policies of the IMF hurt growth, while the Fund argued the opposite. The evidence seemed to be slightly in favor of the Fund.

[1] Bird contends that "results that are robust across different methodologies may be stronger than those that are methodology-specific" (1996a, 497). It is fortunate when all methodologies point to the same finding, for the result is less controversial. However, if none of the methodologies employed account for the possible effects of unobserved variables, then the robustness may simply inform that controlling for observed variables consistently produces biased results. Moreover, the assertion that IMF programs are benign toward growth may not even hold across the methods so far employed.

Figure 1.1. An image of your research. Please note that the figure title and caption must be at least 10pt spaced. The caption should be single spaced. The figure is numbered sequentially and uniquely. All figures/images/schemes must be labeled. The figure title should match exactly on the page as it appears in the list of figures. Any page that has a figure or image should be numbered. The title needs to appear alongside the image, but the caption may continue onto a second page.

In study after study, if one controlled for the fact that countries following IMF policies had problems of their own to begin with, the introduction of IMF policies was shown to have no negative consequences for economic growth. The growth critique of the IMF was pronounced dead (Pastor 1987a,b).

And a subsequent study showed that while the immediate impact of IMF programs may be negative, accelerated growth resulted within three years (Conway 1994). Over the past two years, the contagion of the West Asian financial crisis has spread from Thailand to Indonesia and Korea, to Japan and Russia. Thus it is clear that the IMF has failed in its mission to promote international economic stability.

Landscaped pages

- The page number is positioned so that it will align with other pages (bottom center) when the page is turned for printing and publication.
- Margins remain the same
- The page number remains unobscured

This is an example of a landscaped page. Note: Location of page numbers stays consistent throughout the entire dissertation. The page number is positioned so that it will align with other pages (bottom center) when the page is turned for printing and publication.

Appendices

- Supplementary information you would like to include in the dissertation but does not fit within the main chapters.
- The appendix appears after the last chapter or conclusion but before the References/Bibliography. All pages of the appendix are numbered, and it must follow the same formatting rules as the rest of the dissertation:
  - Double spaced
  - Figures and tables must be labeled sequentially and uniquely
  - 1" margin on all sides
- If you include just one Appendix, it can appear just as chapters do on the Table of Contents.
- If you include more than one Appendix, you must provide a List of Appendices in the front matter where each appendix appears with its title alongside the first page number at which it can be found. Each appendix should be labeled in a consistent and progressive manner.

References

- This section can be called REFERENCES, BIBLIOGRAPHY, or WORKS CITED.
- The list must be double spaced as with the rest of the dissertation. Individual citations may be 1.5 spaced.
- The references section is the very last section of the dissertation. No information may follow it.
  - Exception: IFA/Music candidates may include Plates and/or Catalogues either as an appendix or at the end of the manuscript, immediately following the References section. If submitted after the References, the pages do not receive page numbers.
- The page numbering continues from the rest of the dissertation.
